

FROM THE REVIEWS. . .

“An absolute must for high school and college students. I urge you to use it in your classes as a focus for discussion about sex role stereotyping, beauty, and self esteem; women and the media; sexism; pornography; rape; etc.”– Phyllis Chesler Ph.D., author of Woman and Madness and About Men

“This video tape overflows with information relevant to the relation between media portrayals of women and the various forms of violence and exploitation heaped upon us. We recommend it.”
– National Coalition on Domestic Violence

“I think it (the video) brilliantly illustrates how the media objectifies women: those who have not understood in the past what objectification is will understand it fully from this video.”– Andrea Dworkin, author of Woman Hating, Letters from a War Zone, Mercy and others.

“Warning... is an excellent synthesis of how beauty pageants, weight loss, eating disorders, cosmetic surgery, TV ads, music videos, cartoons, pornography, toys and language usage all interact to form our idea of ‘beauty’ and sex. Highly recommended for sociology, communication, criminal justice, psychology, anthropology, and business collections from junior high through graduate level.”–The Library Journal

“A tremendous video that empowers us to take effective and urgently needed action to heal ourselves and our society. I recommend it highly.”
– Riane Eisler, author of Chalice and the Blade: Our History and Our Future and The Partnership Way.
